Supernatural Filmmaking Camp for Teens is an intensive, four week summer program for high school youth in Lowell interested in learning the filmmaking process. Together as a team, the group will learn the basic steps and skills needed to produce an original fiction film. They will learn how to develop a script, scout for locations, storyboard the action, act for film, and record “on-location” and in the LTC studio. Finally the group will learn video editing and other elements of post-production.

Be prepared to be challenged and to have fun. Be prepared to contribute, and help meet the needs of a successful team. We are looking for a few interested participants who are dedicated and motivated to learn the art, science, and process of creative filmmaking. Participants must commit to the entire four week program. At the conclusion of the program, participants will receive $100 stipends.

Instructor Eric Stevenson has taught media production at Nashoba Valley Technical High School since 2009. He has an MA in Education and has won numerous production awards for his work with students
